

ARRAIGNS MAN HE ADVOCATED

McGillivray Denounces La Follette And His Actions As He Withdraws From Race.

THE SUNDAY SURPRISE IN POLITICS

Helps Davidson's Cause--John Strange Helps Senator
In A Crisis--Other Gossip Of
The "Ring."

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, July 30.—"Mirabil dictum" Senator James McGillivray has seen light. After a year of futile campaigning he withdraws from the race for the republican nomination for governor. Steps down and out and as a parting shot throws a bomb into the camp of Leinroot that may explode and do much damage. Aimed directly at La Follette, the state senator's announcement of his retirement from the race, is a masterpiece. He calls a spade a spade and resents interference of federal office holders especially when these same federal office holders bitterly attacked other federal office holders who opposed him. In making his step to the rear McGillivray has paved the way for an overwhelming Davidson majority. This is the opinion of politicians here today. With McGillivray in the vote would be divided. Now all who oppose La Follette and his methods will be aligned on the Davidson side of the fortifications.

McGillivray's ideas.

In a statement addressed to the voters of Wisconsin Mr. McGillivray declares that the republican party, "half free and half bossed," will not remain in control for long. The "present unfortunate circumstances" in the party are charged to La Follette by the retiring candidate. He adds that a strong element in the party feels that it should be honored at this time, and as he refers to the former candidacy of Nils Haugen Mr. McGillivray evidently alludes to the Norwegians. The state senator was the first candidate to enter the race for the governorship, and as he has been busy in his campaign from that time until now, his withdrawal comes in the nature of a surprise.

Sought Free Field.

In his statement he says: "It has always been my practice in public affairs to be frank and state just where I stand on men and measures. When I entered the race for the nomination I had great faith in the principles of the primary law. I believed each candidate would have an opportunity to stand on his own merits and be judged by the voters without any combinations of men or money."

"Now that the campaign has progressed well on to the time of filing the nomination papers, I find an effort is being made by some of our friends to control the nomination by undue influence in the interest of certain candidates. This has engendered much feeling among the republicans throughout the state and unless something is done to quell the dissension our party will suffer at the polls. It is a well-known fact that a party divided against itself cannot long exist. The republican party will not long remain in control half free and half bossed."

Acts to Restore Peace.

"The welfare of the party is more than the ambition of any one man, and each member ought to yield his personal ambition for the good of the party. As a member of this party, which has done so much for the state and nation and its people, I could not afford to see it drenched in feuds and rent asunder by jealousy, spite and bossism, when, perhaps, I might aid in preventing its defeat. I long for the good old feeling which used to exist when republicans would like to meet each other and work in harmony for the good of the state. We have been drifting apart. For what? Let us quit fighting each other and spend our energies for better use. This is a great state, and there is room for all to do a good work. We can make our state strong and prosperous by working together."

Of Senator La Follette's selection of a gubernatorial candidate McGillivray says: "A prophet only could predict who is the most capable and best fitted to act as governor of this state. There may be those in the race whom we could class as incapable. All of the candidates may be able to handle the duties of the office with credit to the state."

Blames La Follette.

Concluding the senator says: "Granting that the situation in the republican party will be simplified if one candidate withdraws his name, I feel it my duty to the party, under the present unfortunate circumstances which have been brought about by the action of our United States senator, to make this sacrifice."

While the senator does not say so directly, the inference some draw from the language of his statement is that he will support the candidacy of Governor Davidson, and it is believed that a large majority of his supporters will follow his lead.

Speaker Irvine L. Leinroot, who is in Milwaukee today, but would not discuss the probable effect of Senator McGillivray's withdrawal. He said he had heard of it, but did not care to make any comment.

John Strange.

The candidacy of John Strange, of Oshkosh, for lieutenant governor solves the great problem that has been worrying Senator La Follette for months. The senator now believes he has succeeded in heading off W. D. Connor of Marshfield, the millionaire lumberman and chairman of the republican state central committee. Up to this time Connor has been the only candidate for lieutenant governor. It is known that Senator La Follette was undecided whether to take a hand as between Gov. Davidson and Speaker Leinroot until Connor came out for lieutenant governor and espoused the cause of Davidson. This act Senator La Follette construed as a shrewd move on the part of Connor to displace Senator La Follette as the party boss in Wisconsin, by using the lieutenant governorship as a stepping stone to the governorship or senatorship two years hence. Strange's platform is an echo of La Follette's speech endorsing Speaker Leinroot, and he makes it plain that it is the La Follette vote he wants. He says in part:

"The struggle made by the republican party should not stop for the sake of harmony. Harmony at the expense of compromise of principles or in a lessening of that aggressiveness which has resulted in so many victories, means ultimately the loss of all that has been gained. With this statement I submit my candidacy, hoping that it will meet the approbation of the progressive republicans of the state."

The control of the temporary organization of the convention will depend upon the action the committee takes regarding these contests.

GOING AFTER RIGHT-OF-WAY

Through the Country at Once—Final Route Chosen Will Depend on Attitude of Property Holders.

After an eventful touring car trip from Toledo to Chicago, punctuated with several delays due to hotboxes and other mishaps of a similar nature, H. H. Clough reached Janesville by train this morning. His wife and family will come to Janesville today in the automobile, the roads permitting. Dickenson MacAllister of Chicago who built the Metropolitan Elevated and the Alcyon road and who was president of the first named corporation for a number of years, was expected to arrive here this noon. It was the intention of both men to make an inspection of the local street car system this afternoon.

To Determine the Route.

"We are going to work now to see what can be done about the right of way," said Mr. Clough this morning. "The final route chosen will depend in a measure on how well we are treated by property owners. Just before coming here from Ohio we secured 15 miles right-of-way for the line from Elyria to Oak Point on Lake Erie without cost, the farmers freely admitting that the coming of the interurban would raise the value of their land all the way from $25 to $250 an acre. We shall probably make two or three surveys along tentative routes and after all matters pertaining thereto have been adjusted it will require some time to get the right-of-way finally chosen in readiness for the actual building operations."

As Good As Money Can Build.

It is our intention to push this project to the best of our ability and Mr. MacAllister is quite a pusher. We shall build as good a road as money can build. Mr. Clough is also known hereabouts as a man who does not allow hay-crops to mature too frequently on real estate where he expects to lay steel rails and the prospects for actual building operations before the snow flies seem unusually bright at this time. The franchise which the city council will be asked to grant will have to be published for two weeks in the official city paper before any action can be taken.

PREACHER SEES WIFE IN SPIRIT OF INJUNCTION.

Des Moines, Ia., July 30.—The Rev. L. W. Nive is enjoined by the courts of Polk county from calling upon or seeing his young wife. Notwithstanding the injunction, the wife is the minister's constant attendant and the sheriff and his deputies, though feeling that there is a possibility that the injunction has been violated, are in a position to do nothing.

The minister is lying ill, racked with a nervous disease which was caused by his wife's action in attempting to secure a divorce. He has made no effort to see his wife, but the wife has come to him and the two have been very happy together. Intimate friends of the family say the divorce case is not even discussed.

Cannonsburg, Pa., July 30.—Officers today arrested Elmer Dempster, a nineteen-year-old negro, for the murder of Mrs. Samuel Pearce and two children and the shooting of a third child last evening. Dempster was a helper on the Pearce farm. It is alleged that he made a complete confession.

Landed in Jail.

Washington, Pa., July 30.—Dempster was safely lodged in jail here. Shortly after leaving Cannonsburg a crowd of twenty men boarded the car and with shouts of "Lynch him, kill him" dragged the prisoner and officers from the car. A fierce struggle followed, but the officers drove the mob off at the points of revolvers.

R. W. Penaff, who carried a printer's traveling card from Rochester, N. Y., was killed in the Milwaukee railway yards in St. Paul while trying to board a car.

No Action--Secretary Root
to Speak.

Rio de Janeiro, July 30.—If the Pan-American congress fails to take an action on the drago doctrine the United States will submit the question of the forcible collection of debts from the governments to the next The Hague conference. It is probable that the congress here will take no action in the matter. There is a disagreement regarding the form of the resolution, some of the delegates wanting a definite declaration.

Secretary of State Root advises that no attempt be made to dictate to creditor nations and his counsel is likely to prevail. Consequently the question, unimpaired, will go to The Hague for settlement.

Council Bluffs, Ia., July 30.—Because of the exorbitant demands of the local ice trust, Council Bluffs is to have a municipally owned ice manufactory. The city council has had the matter under consideration for several weeks, and the individual members have arrived at the conclusion that they could do nothing better for the general run of people here than to go into the business themselves. The ice trust is demanding $14 per ton, while the cost of manufacture is only $1.50 a ton.

A special meeting of the council has been called for tonight to pass the ordinance, a majority of the councilmen having declared themselves in favor of the bill.

located at the four inner corners at the intersection of the wings, which will give an uninterrupted vista through the building. These enter on the principal floor through curved porticoes capped by half domes, and land directly in the rotunda where the four grand staircases leading to the second floor are located. The height of the rotunda reaching from the ground floor to the dome will be 176 feet and it will be 84 feet in diameter. It will be adorned with columns of marble and granite. The exterior diameter of the dome will be 102 feet and its total height from the ground to the top will be 289 feet. A stone balustrade will enclose the terrace raised several feet above the level of the street upon which the building will rest. The sides of the terrace will be parallel with the avenues on the four sides of the square, from which straight driveways will lead to the stairs at the entrances. The ground floor will contain the minor and appointive offices, the principal floor the appointive offices, and on the second floor the assembly, senate, and supreme court chambers. A lecture hall and memorial rooms will also be provided. The architects are George B. Post & Sons of New York, who were selected by the commission after the recent competition in which five firms entered. The new building will cost between $5,000,000 and $6,000,000. The commission consists of Chairman O. H. Ingram, Eau Claire; Gov. James O. Davidson, Madison; J. A. Van Cleave, Marinette; George H. D. Johnson, Milwaukee.

weather and attraction. There were between fifteen hundred and two thousand present at the morning service
and an equally large throng assembled for the lecture of Sylvester A.
Long in the evening. It was a great day, and probably no larger crowd
will be gathered this season.

Day Spent on Grounds

The congregation of people commenced as early as nine o'clock. In the morning and continued unceasing-
ly. The larger number came in families or picnic parties and baskets laden with dinner were everywhere in evidence. Most of those who came in the morning did not return to the city, enjoying lunch on the surrounding slopes or eating at the restaurant.
Others came in the afternoon with evening lunch, while some remained the entire day. In the assemblage were a large number from the surrounding country, who drove in and
several hundred came on the interur-
ban from Beloit and along the way.
The crowd was surely cosmopolitan.
All ages, all walks of life and all regions of the country were represented.

SUNDAY, A THIRTEEN-INCH GUN AMONG REVIVALISTS

At two o'clock in the afternoon the big auditorium was packed. Every seat, pew and chair was taken and people were standing about outside
or sat on the sidewalk to the north and west. The Chicago Glee club at this time rendered one of their delightful concert and half an hour later
the great "Billy" Sunday mounted
the platform while the audience cheered. He recognized the welcome with a nod and was introduced by Mr.
Flude. Coming to the stage he thanked those present for the ovation and
the big, thirteen-inch, rapid-fire gun
of revivalists with rattling attachment opened fire. For an hour and forty minutes, working harder than any city speaker that ever visited the city,
he attacked sin right and left. He talked plainly, mingling slang with beautiful quotations and hurled forth
a violent invective and brought a message from Christ. Misbelievers
he ridiculed with the emptiness of their own theories and begged and pleaded with his hearers to leave the present-day life of sin and come to Christ.

Why You Should Believe

In part Sunday said: "Though I am
a Presbyterian minister I do not come to preach sectarian religion, but Christianity. I have often been asked why I do not attack the Catholics, but my reply is that I have more friends
among the priesthood of that church
than any other Protestant minister;
that the Catholic religion will endure
as long as does the world; and that I am too busy endeavoring to clean up
the dirt and rubbish in the yard of Protestantism."

If the world is bad with Christianity what would it be without it? Show me the person who ever suffered by
it or the nation that ever died from
it.

Some refuse to believe in the Bible
because it is not proven in every particular. But you should obey nevertheless. You do not understand the nerves of hearing and of sight, but
you are compelled to believe in them.
While you can prove some of the Bible you can't prove one point of the evolution theory. Animals of the Nile valley that were embalmed 4,000
years ago have not evolved one particle and are the same in species today as then. An animal can be developed; the specie cannot be altered. Some people become too intellectual to believe in God. But they see the planets, the sun, the moon
and the stars and yet insist they were not created by some divine power.
And I'm not an infidel because I'm not a fool. God made those things

and you of pigmy mind damn and sheer Him.

Woman Maker of World

The prisons are full of men. Why?
Look at the saloons; they are full of
men. Look at the gambling dens;
they are full of men. Look at the churches; they are full of women.
63 per cent are women. There is nothing so good this side of Heaven
as a good woman and there is nothing
worse or more degraded and bad
grading this side of hell than a bad woman. What the women are so is the homes; what the homes are so is the nation; what the nation are so is the world. But God help the poor little children; born in homes of affluence and wealth where they are turned over to a governess, whose principal interest is the amount of salary per week, and where the mother is kissing and hugging a pug cat.
And when you look at such spectacles
and other abuses of the rich do you wonder at the breach between the poor and the rich man?

Other Gods Before Us

Think of the amount expended each year on the despoiling of our physical
being: $14,000,000 for drink last year
—enough to have fed all the starving world. $300,000,000 for tobacco. I know I am touching a tender spot in mentioning this, but I don't care. In reply to the question, can't a man
be a Christian and smoke, I say, yes,
but a mighty dirty one. $70,000,000
for amusements; $20,000,000 for dogs;
$75,000,000 for confections; and $23-000,000 for chewing gum. This latter amount is larger than was given
from all sources to all missions during the same period.

God said, and spoke so no one could fail to understand. Thou shalt have no other Gods before me. Many of us worship money. We're money drunk; we're money crazy. But you came into the world naked and you'll

Mr. Sowerby's theme was "The River of God in America" and he opened his discourse with the text: "There is a river, the stream whereof shall make glad the city of God." In the Bible is described a river, which at its source trickles from the threshold of a door. At the end of the first thousand cubits it is ankle deep, at the end of the second thousand it is knee deep, at the end of the third it is a stream which one must swim
and at the fourth it is a flood which no man can stem. Such a flow is the river of God and to its enlargement
may be compared the growth of Christianity. The source is the birth of Christ; the first thousand cubits represent His boyhood, manhood, Calvary, the Resurrection and the day of Pentecost. The second thousand takes us to the day when Constantine,
emperor of Rome, avowed his faith
and declared his dominion a Christian nation. The third thousand takes us through the dark days to the times
of Martin Luther and the founder of the present time. Now
the river of God is a flood which no man can stem; the religion of Christ
has reached every continent and every island. In American life, under the surface, is the spirit of Christianity,
that is real, magnificent and great.
This spirit prompted the thousands who attended the funeral of the late President McKinley to break forth spontaneously and devoutly in the strains of "Nearer My God to Thee."
But every river has its danger points,
its shoals, rapids and cataracts. We must beware of these. One of these danger points is the liquor traffic.
Another is immigration. Immigrants
from the northern countries of Europe made this country; but the flood of peoples from Southern Europe is endangering it. There is the gambling spirit, which no man can possess, and be a Christian. There is the speculative spirit, which a man

leave it naked. We worship society—
we sin for it—it is our god. We worship cards, liquor, dresses and jewels and lust.

The man who will kiss is one of the worst. God said thou shalt not kill, thou shalt not steal, thou shalt not commit adultery, but he said more about swearing. Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain,
for the Lord shall not hold him guilt-
less who taketh His name in vain.
The first three were short, but more stress was placed in the last. And teach these things to your children.
Do not wait until it is too late.

Christian Life Satisfactory

We are going crazy in search for peace of mind. Peace doesn't satisfy.
The most famous of men do not die
happy. Personal charm does not satisfy; Lady Hamilton, a peeress of charming women, passed away in a poverty-stricken garret in Paris.
Achievements do not satisfy; Napoleon paved his way over human skulls
to the barren rocks of St. Helena. Wealth does not satisfy; Yerkes died in the Waldorf-Astoria hotel with the best of physicians about him, but
his wife refused to come to his bedside and his body was carried down
a freight elevator in a common wicket basket and taken to his great home
which $5,000,000 had furnished. Education does not satisfy; Byron led a miserable life and Aaron Burr, possessor of as great a mind as ever lived in America, died an ignoble
death.

Sunday Baseball Mentioned

In referring to the commandment,
"Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy," Mr. Sunday spoke of Sunday baseball. He said I never played a game on the Sabbath; the National League had not commenced the desecration of that day when I was a player. The game this afternoon is for a good cause surely and I would like to help, but I would do it by a contribution and not by buying a ticket.
From then on he talked of baseball.
He said twenty years ago he drew $500 dollar a month for playing the game and no one called him a great player. Now he is preaching the gospel of Christ and for it he is vilified and cursed. He quit the bunch just nine teen years ago, as he responded to an announcement of a Salvation Army meeting in Chicago. From there he went to the Pacific Garden Mission
and after a few meetings, Mrs. Col.
Clark, one of the best women in the world, placed her hands on his head and asked him to come to Christ. He did and the newspapers next morning
told the story. He hated then to go to "practice" for he feared the horse-laugh of his friends. But some comgratulated him; others offered to help him, and still others looked on with suspicion. There are many who would be Christians but they haven't the grit. It is better, though, to take the horse-laugh of people in this world
than the horse-laugh of the devil in eternity. Mr. Sunday spoke interestingly of his baseball career, his companions and their future lives, and last told of being ordained a Presbyterian minister eight years ago,
though he had never seen the inside
of a seminary.

REV. MR. SOWERBY LECTURED

Yesterday morning, between ten-thirty o'clock and noon there was Sabbath day worship. The services opened with the congregation singing
"Stand Up, Stand Up for Jesus."
John H. Jones, vice-president of the Chautauqua association, led and the piano accompaniment was played by Frank Albrecht. At the request of Dr. Sowerby, Mr. Bender read the scripture lesson for the sermon lecture which followed after the singing of "Just as I Am."

SYLVESTER A. LONG PROVES A VERY MAGNETIC SPEAKER

In the evening the program opened with a sacred concert by the glee club at half-past seven and at eight o'clock Stage Manager Flude introduced Sylvester A. Long. Mr. Long is a young, active-appearing man and he took his audience by surprise with a quiet, easy spoken introduction. It was clever. He told of his little yellow dog; not of his boyhood days,
that passed through life with every victorious, but his tall, injured in some way and whose yellow cats up yellow trousers. This, dog would "chase"
and "tetch" a stone. He surrendered
it only when struck a sharp blow in the back of the neck or was sharply commanded to "drop it." This was Mr. Long's text and the sermon he preached thereon, linked with his own personal magnetism, held the listeners in rapt attention. In brief he said:
If you have an ugly face, drop it. It has lost you friends and it takes much less energy to smile than it does to scowl. Drop the habit of carrying yourself around alone in the world.
Find somebody or something to love.
If you have the talk habit drop that,
for many a young career has been
wrecked by an overworking mouth.
Drop insincerity. The best soldiers on the globe are the Americans for they are sincere in the purpose they have. Roosevelt is successful because he is sincere in what he attempts and Bryan will be successful for he is sincere. The bad-thinking habit should also be dropped. There are more lives ruined by bad thoughts than there are any other way for the mind is the breeder of actions. Drop the slow habit.
Work and work fast and spend more time in rest. Drop that chronic dis-satisfactory habit. Get satisfied with conditions or find conditions that will satisfy you. Here the speaker took occasion to pay high tribute to the school teachers and referred to the sincere pedagogues as the most kingly and most worthy of workers. Drop
that armour plate of cold indifference.
Take interest in all that is good in the world, and if you can't accomplish
good yourself cheer those that are.
Following the lecture Alfred L.
Flude offered two moving pictures.
They were scenes from baby life and its true nature, to the sweet and harmless existence of the child pleased greatly.

EAGLES LOST IN PRETTY CONTEST

WITH HARVARD AT FAIR GROUNDS YESTERDAY.

DECIDED IN TENTH INNING

When Visitors Negotiated Three Runs,
Making Score 5 to 2—Great Game
for Spectators.

Yesterday afternoon a crowd numbering between six and seven hundred people witnessed a fast, snappy
game of baseball between two evenly matched teams at the fair grounds. It required ten innings to decide the contest, which was completed in one hour and fifty minutes. A Janesville runner took two chances in the last half of the ninth when the score was 3 to 2 and a series of fortunate plays
in the first half of the tenth enabled

CASEY'S GREAT SLIDE IN THE SECOND

the Harvard men to bring in three runs. Capt. Connors of the Janesville Eagles won the toss from Capt.
Breen and the locals took to the field.
C. W. Bradley of Chintoy and A. D.
Chattelle both acted as umpires, alternately watching the buses and standing behind the pitcher.

Visitors Scored First

In the first inning the first three batters for the visitors went out in consecutive order, the first man striking out. The Eagles got four men to bat, but did not better. Neither side scored in the second lining,
though Casey for the locals got his base on a clean hit and made a pretty slide to second, only to be put out attempting to steal third. O'Brien got his base on balls and Strain hit safely and were nicely on their way
round the circuit before Osgood sent a long one into center-field, bringing one out into center-field, bringing O'Brien in, but going out on first.
Butts made a safe hit and a wild throw to third brought in Strain. Connors' fly was neatly corralled by Dunwiddie in the mud-wallow, back of second base, retiring the side. Score:
2 to 0. Janesville failed to negotiate
any runs in its half and the fourth inning and first half of the fifth were uneventful. In the second half Jones landed safely on first and Carle got his base on balls. A two-base hit by Riley let in Jones and advanced Carle
to third. Connors' hit was captured too soon, Ward's was nailed by the pitched, and likewise Wendt's little one.

Score Evened in Ninth

Neither side scored again until the last half of the ninth when Janesville got another run, making the extra inning necessary. Dunwiddie made a nice clean hit into center garden and after he had stolen second Jones
followed him with another in the same place. Carle popped fly was caught.
The catcher threw wildly to third base and Dunwiddie reached home in safety. Jones tried to steal in on the same ticket, cutting third by several feet, and was declared out. At home in a very close decision. Riley got his base on balls and Connors hit
out. In the first half of the tenth inning Strain for Harvard, got his base on balls. Osgood sent a hot one over to third, which was juggled by Connors, who had been playing an exceptionally beautiful game up to that time. Johnson followed with a twobase hit, which permitted Strain to circle the bases and cross the home

plate. Butts sent out a hot grounder which Carle had some trouble in picking up over in his mid-puddle. He got it to first in time to put the batter out, but in the meantime Osgood
had crossed the home plate. Johnson was now on third. Connors sent one out to shortstop which let in the third runner. Breen batted to third and Third Baseman Connors sent the ball
to first in time to put out both runner and batter. Ward, Wendt, and Casey were unable to save the day in the last half and the game ended with the score 5 to 2. Harvard has lost but two games out of thirteen this season, the honors belonging to Kenosha and Dundee. The receipts of the game, above expenses, are to go to a benefit fund for Ernest Allen. A neat sum was realized.

WANT A LIFE STORY IN UNCLASSIFIED ADS.

CHAPTER III

Said the wife to a friend, "A stitch, when in time, will, so the old adage says, 'often save nine.' I do my own sewing and baby's clothes make. But I also save time as the stitches it take."

"My husband, a sewing machine bought for me. A want ad in the Gazette he changed to see; it told of a place where machines you will find; machines at all prices, machines of all kind."

She then goes to a place not far from small. You may want machinery for part or for all—An engine, a motor, shaft, pulley or wheel—A Gazette want ad is a bargain appeal.

...FORTY YEARS AGO...

Janesville Daily Gazette, Monday, July 30th, 1886.—The Weather.—At 3 o'clock this afternoon the thermometer indicated 69 degrees in the shade.

Base Ball.—The grand "bowlers" meet this evening to play the first match game of the season under the new regulations. Let every member of this club be present at six o'clock sharp.

A Rumor.—There was a rumor on the street that a man, living a few miles up the river was thrown from a reaper on Saturday and killed. We made an effort to ascertain the truth of the matter, but could trace the rumor to no reliable source.

False.—A story has been put afloat, doubtless by interested parties to the effect that the new Merchants' Union Express Company was negotiating to sell out to one of the old companies. The statement is without a shadow of foundation, as we learn by a circular from the general office at Auburn. So far from such being the case, the officers are working with energy to perfect the details and expect to have the lines between important points in running order sometime during September.

The Menagerie.—Tomorrow morning Van Amburgh & Co. will make their public entrance into Janesville, coming from Whitewater, and their magnificent cortege will parade our principal streets in order to give the public an opportunity of judging as to the extent of the establishment. The mammoth tent, the largest one ever used for menagerie purposes, will be open both afternoon and evening, when in addition to an unparalleled display of rare beasts and birds, visitors will have an opportunity of viewing a selection of pleasing performances by highly-trained ponies, monkeys, mules, lions, tigers and leopards as well as an extraordinary display of training and sagacity by the famous elephant, Tipoo Sahib, the largest quadruped on this continent. This is an exhibition no less instructive than interesting, and one calculated to draw out the very best class of patronage.

Mrs. Donald McLean.

At the automobile races at Toledo, O., track records were lowered. The track was in fair shape except the low end of the turns, which were muddy and slippery. To this is attributed the slow time.

Three of a party of six persons who were boating on Lake Hopatcong, N. J., were drowned when their craft capsized through the apparent inexperience of the men who had undertaken to handle the boat.

Electric Fluid Shatters Tent Pole, Causing Death of One Man.

Conneaut Lake, Pa., July 30.—Lightning struck the tent of a camping party during an electric storm here Sunday, killed Edward Kinsey and severely shocked Robert Martin and A. W. Ruppert, members of an outing club from Wilmerding, Pa.

The men were holding the tent pole in an effort to prevent the tent being blown away, when a bolt shattered it in their hands.

The men were prostrated, but Martin and Ruppert were soon revived.

Kinsey, however, was found to be badly burned along the entire left side of the body and his heart seemed to be affected. He was rushed to a hospital at Meadville on a special train, but died before reaching there.

The two others received burns from which they will recover.

ODD KIND OF MACARONI.

Heaven For Mixed Drinks Served at Dinner by New Cook.

A young housewife on the upper west side of New York, who has been married long enough, however, to know that the breakfast rabbit should be skinned and not plucked, told her cook the other day to have macaroni for dinner.

"Plavere is ut?" asked the guardian of the gas stove, who is new on the job. "You'll find it on the second shelf of the cupboard," replied the young wife, disappearing from the kitchen.

Two hours later her lord came in after a hard day's work at managing a large body of unruly toilers and sat down expectantly to a welcome feast.

"We have macaroni for dinner today," said the wife smilingly.

"Good!" he replied. "Macaroni is my long suit. Watch me."

She did watch him as he enthusiastically dipped the ladle into the inviting mass of noodles and after applying the proper proportion of cheese started it on its way. But there was a painful expression on his face as his teeth met the food, and he stopped to investigate.

He called the cook.

"What's this?" he demanded. "Macaroni, soon," she replied. "Is that so?" sarcastically. "Where do you buy your macaroni in a glue factory or a pulp works? Get the box."

She produced the package. It bore the inscription:

Choice Papler Mache Straws For Mixed Drinks.

"I thought so," spluttered the husband, "ostrich food! Take 'em back to the straw stack." But he is good natured, and the cook still lives to tell the tale.

BEAUTIES' NEW FAD.

Tennis Play in Bathing Suits the Latest at Atlantic City.

Playing tennis in bathing suits is the latest example at Atlantic City, N. J., of the freedom of the shore, says a special dispatch to the New York Globe.

It has been evolved on that beautiful open beach down below the Chelsea cottage colony. The girls down that way have a tennis court carefully marked out up high on the beach, where the sand lies damp and well packed, and there they combine the pleasures of the surf with the exercise of the fascinating inland game.

It is conceded that at no other resort does woman develop such extreme and curious fads as she does at Atlantic City, and no one can tell how these fancies originate. Just now the board walk fad is for the ugliest, huge, amber colored knobs obtainable to be worn as hatpins; some are as large as tennis balls. These appear in all kinds of head covering, from baby hats to yachting caps. When the girl at the shore does a fad she does it to death.

Livingstone's Tree.

The tree upon which Dr. Livingstone carved his initials at the Victoria falls is dying, and it is proposed to cut down the trunk and send it to London to be preserved with other relics, says the Balmavoy Chronicle. It is further proposed to perpetuate the memory of the great explorer by erecting a monument on the spot where the tree now stands.

S.S.S. — WRITE — S.S.S. OUR PHYSICIANS

While we have the utmost confidence in the curative powers of S. S. S. in all blood troubles, yet we realize that in some cases causes unknown to the patient often hinder the best effects of the medicine. For this reason we have maintained for many years a branch to our business known as "Our Consultation Department." This department is composed of regularly graduated and licensed physicians who have made blood and skin diseases their special study, and who are employed solely to advise and help, without charge, those who use S. S. S. Thousands of people have been cured of blood and skin diseases of every kind by the use of S. S. S., and many of those who, perhaps, at first did not find the results entirely satisfactory, wrote our physicians a full statement of their case, and a little advice hastened the cure. We have nothing to sell you, and the only reason for wanting you to write to us is that we may use every effort to see that you get the best result from the medicine. You can then help us by advising your friends to use S. S. S., which you will know from experience is all we claim for it. You can write with the assurance that all correspondence is held in strictest confidence, and that our physicians will give you helpful advice without charge.

There is great good sense in the Spanish saying, "Through not spending enough we spend too much." This is "the Law and the Prophets" in the matter of store-advertising.

As an automobile center Janesville is fast becoming prominent throughout the country.

Was Isaac Stephenson handed another good brick in that Marinette postoffice appointment?

Bryan denounces free silver, with a string to the denouncement and a small "d" to start the word with.

Lightning is not particular where it hits. Even churches are as liable to feel its violence as saloons.

There are just a few days more before the filing of those nomination papers for the September primaries.

"Bill" Vilas is in England. It is possible he and his dear friend "Bill" Bryan may meet at some levee of King Edward's.

Davidson can count on Rock county giving him a good majority despite the efforts of La Follette's followers to turn the tide in favor of Lenroot.

There is no question but Janesville is being improved by the new walks that are being laid and the streets that are being repaired.

Taggart is to leave Indiana to its own device and turn his attention to Missouri. Good for Indiana. Too bad for Missouri.

Ex-Governor Yates of Illinois has tried to belittle the President in his stump speeches in his fight for Culom's toga in the senate and the ridicule is reacting upon his own head.

Janesville has a Chautauqua that bids fair to be as representative as any in the state. According to Mr. Matheson one feature that other Chautauquas boast of, political hargues will be noticeable by their absence.

The Stenographer from Superior, head of the Mary Ann League, erstwhile speaker of the legislature, personal tool of Senator La Follette is having a hard row to hoe these days. He is fast learning that silence is golden and the mysteries of a gum shoe campaign are intricate.

Bitterness, even worse than was engendered during the last three state campaigns, is being exhibited in the present gubernatorial campaign. Davidson and his followers are in earnest in their work and resent the interference of the United States senator they elected in trying to defeat their wishes.

M'GILLIVRAY OUT.

After a campaign for over a year, a campaign that has been fraught with bold statements of sure success, of victory by the right and might of the people, State Senator James McGillivray has officially withdrawn from the race for governor. Not only has he withdrawn from the race but he has added a sting to his announcement in the shape of a denouncement of La Follette and his methods. The worm has turned upon his tormentor and in the last gasp of the dying gubernatorial aspirant he sends his venom into the heel of the man who has crushed his political life out of him. McGillivray is not a strong man in the sense of gubernatorial timber but in withdrawing from the present race and thus uniting his followers with those of Davidson and Connor to defeat Lenroot he has done an act that will bear results. He has practically assured Davidson's nomination by uniting with him in his contest for governor.

"BILLY" SUNDAY.

Perhaps there is no man since the days of Moody and Sankey, who has been so heralded by the press of the country as has "Billy" Sunday, the baseball evangelist. His address yesterday at the Chautauqua grounds was virile and full of strength. He called a spade a spade without fearing results. Enthusiastic and earnest he carried his audience with him and the four thousand persons who heard his address went away with something more in their hearts to think about than when they came to the grounds. "Billy" Sunday is a strong man. His methods may be sensational but he accomplishes results. In bringing him to Janesville the Chautauqua management have done a great benefit to the community. Such men as he are a help to any city and the results they accomplish, while perhaps not seen on the surface, show in time to come.

LA FOLLETTE'S METHODS.

The New York Sun has the following to say regarding the methods employed by Senator La Follette that may be of interest to the readers. The Sun is a conservative paper and prints conservative news. It is not liable to be stamped as are some other New York papers whose Washington correspondents have lauded the Wisconsin Senator to the skies. It says:

"Out in Wisconsin Senator La Follette is regarded as a candidate for the republican nomination for president. In the attacks which he makes in Chautauqua addresses on his brother senators who voted against the amendments that he proposed to the rate bill the same plan of personal campaign which he found so successful in his contests for the governorship may be recognized. His hand is always against every public man who does not share his opinions or who stands in his path. The senator adds to his income by lecturing everybody else, and he is the free lance of the Chautauqua circuit. His assaults on Senator Spooner in his home state were too savage to be justified by the exigencies of politics, and lost him the sympathy of some of his own supporters. He is now putting his republican colleagues in the pillory and pelting them with the bitterest invective. It is said that in Indiana the other day he turned on Senator Hemenway, who had introduced him to his audience, and charged him with caring more for the interests of the railroads than for the welfare of the people. It is intimated that in his future Chautauqua addresses Senator La Follette will call the roll of his opponents in the senate with dramatic effect and speak his mind out about them. This is probably true, for senatorial or other courtesy is not one of Mr. La Follette's strong suits, but it is doubtful whether such tactics will be successful in the larger field.

"Senator La Follette began one of his campaigns for the governorship by insinuating that his old patron, Senator Sawyer, had attempted to bribe him by offering a retainer in a court case. Mr. La Follette's friends were shocked and the old senator's friends were indignant. The young reformer's reputation suffered more than the senator's. The returning boomerang knocked him out of public life for several years.

"Mr. La Follette always suspects his opponents of bribery and unspeakable iniquities. He once charged that his own delegates to a state convention were taken to a room in a hotel, where money in large bills was stacked on a table and held down by paper weights. None of his faithful delegates was tempted; yet Mr. La Follette complained that votes pledged to him were 'spilt' away by unlawful means. It is characteristic of him to be strong in charges, weak in the proofs and utterly illogical in his conclusions.

"For intemperate utterances he is famous. The report that he had advocated the hanging of President Fish of the Illinois Central he denied vehemently, but confessed to having said that he would like to see St. Vincent Fish hung up by the thumbs for three hours. The only provocation was that Gov. La Follette had been unable to get a sleeping car berth 'until midnight' during one of his railroad journeys.

"Probably the senator's audiences will hear more politics from him this summer than they bargained for. He is always campaigning. At one of the old settlers' meetings in Wisconsin he talked politics so much that Senator Quarles protested that it was a pity that old settlers can not get together once in a while to talk over old times and again contemplate the past and rejoice over the greatness of the present without somebody taking a hypodermic syringe and injecting a lot of politics into the meeting. The hypodermic syringe will be very much in evidence at the Chautauqua symposiums this summer.

"The senator's tragic intensity, his arrogation of all the virtues to himself and denial of them to others, the aspersions he casts upon the motives of public men, and his inurbane manners, must not be reckoned against him too seriously. He happens to be one of those unfortunates who are utterly destitute of a sense of humor.

PRESS COMMENT.

To Choose as Best They Can
Oshkosh Northwestern: Davidson and Connor, or Lenroot and Strange—it is up to the republicans of this state to take their choice.

Querer, isn't it?
Milwaukee Sentinel: It seems strange in this civilized, commonwealth a civilized way can not be devised to adjust that John Dietz is sue.

Might Have Been Expected
Chicago News: It does seem hard after a man has worked a lifetime at the profession of being a relative to Russell Sage not to get anything out of it.

Poor Fishing—That
Evening Wisconsin: The luck wasn't very extra with the party that went fishing for Hatten and came back with nothing in its basket but John Strange.

DEMOCRATS HOLD
"INFORMAL MEET"COUNTY CONVENTION WOULD HAVE BEEN TOO ILLEGAL.

CANDIDATES FOR OFFICES

Were Named and Their Nomination
Papers Signed by All of Those Present.

Though the formal call was for a county convention, the twenty-five or more leading democrats gathered in a cozy little circle inside the "chance" hall of the circuit court room this afternoon, one and all, pleaded consciences void of offense and assured the inquirer that it was only a little informal meeting of party members to devise ways and means of getting nomination papers circulated and a ticket in the field. This is certainly not a convention," said P. Mount. "That would be against the law." J. J. Cunningham, who seemed to be acting as chairman, and Frank Morris, of Milton Junction, who appeared to be secretary, seconded Mr. Mount's declarations, coupling with their statements some complimentary references to the primary law.

DEMOCRATIC COUNTY SLATE.

For Sheriff—
IRA W. JONES of Beloit.
For County Clerk—
WILLIAM SHOEMAKER of Edgerton.
For County Treasurer—
W. F. CHRISTMAN of Clinton.
For District Attorney—
CLAUDE HENDRICKS of Janesville.
For Clerk of Court—
HENRY MILLS of Beloit.
For Register of Deeds—
P. J. MAC FARLANE of Johnstown.
For Assemblyman 1st Dist.—
JOHN A. PAUL of Milton.
For Assemblyman 3rd Dist.—
CAPT. W. A. KNILANS of Beloit.
For Assemblyman 2nd Dist.—
EDWARD CONNELL, or
FRED BURPEE, or
WILLIAM SMITH.

The meeting was a most harmonious one. Two candidates were suggested for some of the offices and after a talk around the one who had met with the most favor was agreed upon. The nomination papers were then drawn up and signed by all present. Some of the more active members of the party will circulate the papers and secure the full quota of 75 signers in the seven precincts. As there are five precincts in Janesville the task will not prove a very difficult one. The number of signers required is equivalent to 3 per cent of the vote.

Among those present at the session were: J. J. Cunningham, Frank Morris of Milton Junction, P. J. Mount, George Sutherland, Isaac Connor, Edward Connell, George Croft, Andrew Jensen of Edgerton, O. P. Murwin of Fulton, John Ward of Johnstown, William Duche of Bradford, J. C. Goodrich of Milton, Ira W. Jones of Beloit, William Lathrop, Turtle, Joseph Williams of Rock, Charles Hahn of Edgerton, George Ous of Rock, W. F. Christman of Clinton, Charles Palmer of Lima, William Griffin of Rock, Cornelius Buckley of Beloit.

At three o'clock the full county slate had been drawn up, with the exception of assemblyman from the 2nd district, (the city of Janesville). The names of Edward Connell, Fred Burpee, and William Smith were mentioned and the prospects seemed to be that Alderman Connell would draw the plum.

LAUNCHES MUST HAVE
BEACONS AT NIGHTOtherwise City Marshal Appleby Will Act on the Complaints He Has Already Received.

Owners of launches, plying the Rock river who persist in disregarding the navigation laws by cruising about nights without displaying any lights are likely to be hauled into court and required to pay heavy fines if they do not mend their ways. Their neglect is particularly dangerous to other craft now that the Chautauqua Assembly is in session and the traffic on the portion of the river near the city is unusually large. City Marshal Appleby has received a number of complaints and intends to act upon it this word to the wise proves insufficient.

A Horse Census.

A cavalry authority in Belgium estimates that there are more than 80,000,000 horses in the world. There are 22,000,000 in Russia, while Germany and Austria-Hungary each has more than the British Isles, where it is reckoned there are about 3,000,000.

This Proposition Is Now Up

Can we longer afford to overlook the fact that we can secure the very best of dental service at about half the rates we have been paying? Dr. Richards of Janesville, the independent dentist, says he would be delighted to have his work (put out at a modest price) compared with work done by others at possibly double his prices. He affirms that the comparison will establish the fact that his work is good in every respect. His work is done thoroughly. His work is substantial, and, in fact, not excelled by that of any other local dentist.

In addition to the reasonableness of his prices he gives close attention to painless work. Now see what you get by having him do your dental work.

SOWERBY BEGINS PSYCHIC STUDIES

TWO HUNDRED AT THE CHAUTAUQUA THIS MORNING.

ENTERTAINMENT TOMORROW

Sylvester A. Long Delivers Another Lecture This Afternoon—Full Concert Tonight.

TUESDAY, JULY 31:

10:00 a. m.—Morning lecture, "The Divine Image in Man," Rev. J. H. Sowerby.

2:30 p. m.—Full concert, The Dixie Jubilee Concert Co.

4:15 p. m.—Hot Time Melodies, The Dixies.

7:30 p. m.—Twilight concert, The Dixies.

8:00 p. m.—"Uncle Sam's Folks," John B. Ratto.

9:30 p. m.—Moving pictures.

Two hundred people were gathered at the Chautauqua grounds this morning for the opening lecture of the interesting series by Rev. J. H. Sowerby of Canton, Ill., on the general theme of "Psychic Phenomena in the Light of the Bible." His specific theme was "The Relation Which the Bible Sustains to the Subject," and his lecture was divided into two distinct parts: In the first the speaker gave his reasons for specializing in this branch of study, and in the second he described his method of Bible study, which is basic to the series of lectures that is to follow. The people were much pleased with the discussion and evinced much enthusiasm by their close attention. At the close many came forward and expressed their appreciation.

All explanation of the Bible has been completed and tomorrow the study of psychology will be commenced. The course promises to be very popular and by the end of the week the morning audiences will be as large as are the afternoon or evening, despite the fact that it is very inconvenient for many to leave their homes before afternoon.

Dr. Sowerby also announced that the lecture on "The Trip of the American Republic," to be given on Wednesday evening according to the program will be replaced by a popular lecture on the subject of clairvoyance.

This Afternoon

This afternoon about fifteen hundred people are gathered at the grounds. The program opened at two o'clock with a concert by the glee club and at half-past two Sylvester A. Long gave his second lecture. His topic is "Lightning and Thunder," and his lecture is proving most interesting. At four-fifteen the glee club will again hold the boards.

FULL CONCERT TONIGHT; DIXIES COME TOMORROW

With a full concert this evening the Chicago Glee club will close the Janesville engagement and tomorrow Ferguson's Dixie Jubilee singers take up the musical work. The glee club has given great satisfaction and though it is with sorrow that the patrons of the assembly will part with the singers they extend a cordial welcome to the jubilees who are remembered from last year. As a quartet of vocalists the "glees" proved the best that has visited Janesville for many seasons. Their voices blend in perfect harmony and they sing with grace and ease. Different numbers are enlivened with clever impersonations and Mr. Dixon adds variety to the programs with readings. The solo selections were all worthy of the much applause given them and the trombone quartet pleased immensely. The Dixies will furnish a different style of music, but it is equally as well adapted to Chautauquas. Their repertoire of numbers includes new and old plantation songs, lullabies of the cabin, river songs from the ante-bellum days, negro melodies and comic songs. These are enriched by the mimicry common to the African race. The personnel of the company has changed in but one place, that of baritone. Lorain Board now sings this part. Otherwise the members are as last summer, thus: W. C. Buckner, manager and basso; M. Neale, Gertrude Hawkins-Buckner, soprano and prima donna; Robert Moore, first and lyric tenor; George Hall, second tenor; Miss Belle Stone, contralto and soloist; Miss Lillian Board, pianist. The initial appearance will be in a full concert at half-past two tomorrow afternoon.

TOMORROW AT CHAUTAUQUA IS DAY OF ENTERTAINMENT

Tomorrow's program is almost wholly for entertainment. After the morning lecture there is music and mirth in a full measure. The afternoon will be given over to the Dixie Jubilee singers and in the evening John B. Ratto is to appear. He gives a lecture entitled "Uncle Sam's Folks." The "folks" come from every nation of Europe, Asia, and Africa and in explaining that thereby the American people are the greatest the speaker offers a choice series of dialect and brogue impersonations. To this lecture Mr. Ratto has given much time and he is guaranteed by the Lyceum bureau which sends him. Previous to his lecture there will be a concert and following it Alfred L.

Flude will furnish more of his amusing moving pictures.

RAIN PREVENTED LECTURE SATURDAY AFTERNOON

One of the heaviest storms of the season interfered with the Saturday program. The clouds darkened the sky about noon and thunder and lightning threatened, but despite this many started for the grounds. Hundreds turned back when the first rain came, but about one hundred did reach the tent. A short concert was given in the afternoon by the glee club, but the downpour of rain on the canvas made it impossible for Dr. Hedley to deliver his lecture on "What is a Man Worth?" This was given in the evening, however, replacing Alfred L. Flude's illustrated lecture, "A Trip to Wonderland." Dr. Hedley pleased and amused as he did Friday afternoon and many regret they were unable to hear him. Moving pictures followed the lecture.

LOCAL PARAGRAPHS

Stopped Runaway Horse: Motorman West, who operates the South Main street car, made a spectacular capture of a runaway horse on that thoroughfare Saturday afternoon. He was just turning onto the street for the southward run when a horse going like mad in the same direction rounded the corner. The motorman threw the lever over for full speed, called the conductor to his assistance and catching up with the horse, leaped and caught the reins, bringing the steed to a halt after being dragged several yards.

LIGHTNING WAS VERY DESTRUCTIVE

STORM OF SATURDAY PLAYED HAVOC THROUGH COUNTRY.

LOSS IN THE COUNTY LARGE

Much Damage Done in Vicinity of Janesville—Old Church Burned to Ground.

Saturday's electrical storm was the severest and most intense that has visited this region for many years. All day long the clouds were threatening, but it was not until shortly before two that the storm broke in all its fury. The heavy rainfall, the intense lightning, the repeated fire alarms and the torrents that poured down the roads, sidewalks, gutters and streets all added terror to the minds of the timid. The fury of the storm seemed to be local, as the greatest damage thus far reported was in the vicinity of Janesville.

In the city

D. D. Whaley's home was visited by the electrical current, which did some damage and frightened the persons in the house. Electric light fixtures and connections were ruined in the home of A. C. Jenkins, 123 Milton avenue.

The Rock County Telephone company had a force of men working all day Sunday repairing the damage to its lines. The same is true of the Wisconsin Company. Toll lines on which companies are all right, and the main trouble appears to be local. Rev. Richard Vaughan's residence was also visited and his family was given a severe fright, but the damage was slight. A tower on Buob's brewery was also struck and men working inside it were given severe shocks. Two fires, one at the hatching mill and the other at Soverhill's warehouse, were slight losses, but might have resulted in dangerous fires. Lightning also entered the office of the Singer Sewing Machine Co. on the Corn Exchange and frightened the inmates. Several other private residences are reported as struck, but the damage appears to be small.

Loss to Gardens

The loss to gardens by the rain and washing throughout the city was severe. Gardens on sidehills were badly washed and in several places the entire work of the summer destroyed. Flowers, corn and tomatoes were beaten down and broken off or else washed out by the roots. The roads and gutters also suffered. Today Street Commissioner Sennett will have his hands full cleaning the gutters about the city, where they have been filled by sand and gravel. Near the Five Points two youngsters who ran to the Soverhill farm found a pool big enough to swim in, clothes and all, and as they were wet from the rain the added dampness did not add to their discomfort.

In the Country

The Christian church in the town of Center was totally destroyed by a bolt of lightning which fired the tall steeple. The church is one of the oldest, if not the oldest, in the county and had been used for a place of worship for fifty-five years. Its steeple was a hundred feet high and stood on top of a hill, where it could be viewed for miles around. It was insured for fifteen hundred dollars. Fire also destroyed W. S. Poynter's large barn on the old J. T. Snyder farm, a few hundred yards distant, entirely destroying the contents, which included a large amount of new hay, farm machinery and wagons. Mr. Poynter was barely able to save his live stock. The barn was partially insured. A valuable colt belonging to Mr. Byers, a neighbor, was also killed, and at Orfordville the barn of Mr. Reaney was destroyed with all its contents. Reports from other localities show that the property destroyed including growing crops will be very large and until full reports are in will be hard to estimate.

Street Cars Were Crippled

Though the street cars are provided with lightning arresters, these devices do not work when they are at the end of a line where there is no return circuit. For the first time in four years the lightning caused trouble on Saturday. A bolt struck the wire at two o'clock burning out the motor of Car No. 12. Charles Knoff, motorman, and John Kelly, were in charge with a large number of passengers homeward bound from the Chautauqua aboard. No. 12, which had the hood switch off and escaped injury, came to the rescue. At three o'clock No. 10, in charge of Motorman Thomas Kelly and Conductor William Zabel, was disabled in the same manner. Supt. Murphy was aboard at the time. In both instances the cars were at the end of the cemetery line when the accidents happened. They were fitted out with single motors and put in commission again in the evening.

W. C. Burdette of Indianapolis was in the city last week searching for a twenty-year-old daughter, who left home suddenly and without apprising her parents of her destination. The clue which brought the father to Janesville proved to be a false one and he departed for Rockford in the hope of finding some trace of the girl there.

ular has pulled up, as Miller Huggins has forced himself into the .300 class once more.

Hans Wagner of Pittsburg has gained considerably, but has dropped from second place owing to the fact that a number of hitters have been clouting the ball with a frequency that predicts that both Steinfeldt and Wagner will have competition in the race for first honors. Beebe of St. Louis leads the pitchers, Marshall of St. Louis the catchers, McGinn of New York the first baseman, Ritchey of Pittsburg the second baseman, Aradt of St. Louis the third baseman and Wagner of Pittsburg the shortstops.

Herman Schaefer, the second baseman of the Detroit Americans, has risen to the proud proprietorship of a large bunch of time. His speedy and accurate work around the pivotal station for the Detroit team has won him several offers from other big league teams.

Schaefer covers a big slice of territory, and his favorite stunt is to jump three feet in the air and haul down stinging liners.

Schaefer is of German parentage, but was bred in the middle west, where so many able ball tossers have been produced.

Second Baseman Hobe Ferris of the Boston Americans is just like other players. He says, "I always get the worst of it from the scorers." There's a big reward hung up for the first player who confesses that a scorer "knows how."

TRAIN RUNS INTO LANDSLIDE

Fireman Killed, Engineer Fatally Hurt
and Many Passengers Injured.

Fishkill Landing, N. Y., July 30.—Pacific express train No. 37, of the New York Central, which left New York at 9:32 o'clock Sunday night, was wrecked shortly before midnight a short distance above Chelsea, and 11 miles below Poughkeepsie by running into a landslide which had been swept down from a high embankment by a terrific rainstorm in the afternoon.

The engine of the flyer was thrown from the rails and plunged into the river. Fireman Mills was killed outright and Engineer Edward Wells was so badly injured that he will die.

The locomotive turned turtle, and rolled into the river.

Fifteen passengers were seriously injured and a score of others received minor hurts.

Arrested as Robber Aids.

Warsaw, July 30.—The officers and the entire crew of the Volga steamer Kurjer have been arrested on suspicion of placing the steamer at the disposition of the band that held up a train on the Volga railway last Thursday.

Turks Slay Five Greeks.

Salonica, July 30.—Three hundred Turkish troops attacked and dispersed a Greek band Friday at Rakova, near Monastir. Five of the band were killed.

Danger in Open Fireplaces.

In view of the astounding fact that in one year 1,634 London children have died in consequence of injuries received from open fireplaces, an effort is being made to have a law enacted to punish parents who leave children unguarded in rooms that have such fireplaces. A similar inquiry might be made with important results in America, is the comment made by the New York Observer.

The Sower and the Reaper.

The man who first enunciates a political doctrine rarely survives to carry it into practical effect. Some people are habitually ahead of their time. They see more quickly than others how a certain innovation might profitably be introduced, but after they have worn themselves out in the cause somebody else usually comes along and gathers the fruit of the agitation. —Providence (R. I.) Journal.

Origin of Fireworks.

Fireworks originated in the thirteenth century, along with the evolution of powder and cannon. They were first employed by the Florentines, and later the use of fireworks became popular in Rome at the creation of the popes. The first fireworks which resemble those which we see nowadays were manufactured by Torre, an Italian artist, and displayed in Paris in 1764.

Stahl Talks to Players

"No Short Cut to Mastery of Baseball,"
He Says.

How to Become a Good Batter
and Other Seasonable Hints.

"These 'Baseball Made Easy' brochures and 'How to Become a Ball Player by Correspondence' treatises are only calculated to bother and mystify the young fellow just learning the game," said Captain Jake Stahl of the Washington Americans recently when asked for some points for the beginner.

"There isn't any short cut to a mastery of baseball. It's just a matter of plugging away all the time, like learning the violin or shorthand. The only literary end of the game worth paying any attention to is the book of rules. The young fellow who hopes to become a worth while ball player must make the book of rules his catechism. When he gets the regulations of the game as pat as he can his intuition and the experience he gets in actual play will carry him along if he has the goods to go in with. I don't go so far as to say that all ball players are born and none made. I'd be handing myself out if I said that for I made a sad hash of it when I first started in the game. I began as a pitcher, and it makes me laugh to remember what a botch I was at that end of it. But the top notch players, when you run them over, are all born players, and the artificial players rarely mount to Class A."

"First rate batsmen, for example, are always spunky, aggressive chaps, fellows who possess somewhat pugnacious dispositions and who are afraid of nothing that walks, swims or flies. You can always spot a bad batsman by the way he pulls away from the plate. I hate to see a ball player do that. It always looks cowardly to me."

"The batsman who draws away from the plate is always a perfect mark for the pitcher. The tosser has such a club-bat at his mercy and feeds him any old thing that he likes, confident that he will be able to fool the nerveless one."

"I like to see a batsman stand right over the rock and wait the pitcher's onset like a soldier. It depends upon a batsman's eye and his physical ability as to whether he'd better just meet the ball with his bat or take a full power swing at it. I nearly always try to soak it with all my strength when I get a good one coming along. I strike out pretty often trying to put them away back deep, but I wasn't made to just tap them, and I've got to hit the way I was made to hit. Some batsmen, however, go so wide of the mark when they put their full force into their swings that it's best for them just to meet the ball and thereby improve their chances of finding it."

"The full force hitter is bound to decrease his chance of making it by the momentum of his swing, and some naturally fine batsmen can't hit in a ball game when they put all of their power into the swing."

"Willie Koeler is one of the batsmen who have just to meet it. He used to try to soak it when he first began to play ball, but he never got by that way. His scheme now is to grab the club by the middle and just tap the sphere on the nose with a sort of half arm swing when he sees the one coming that he likes, and his batting average tells the story of how he gets away with the kind of hitting that he is best suited for."

"While I don't like to see a batsman make a mark of himself by failing for everything the pitcher has a mind to shoot at him, still I have good reasons to hate to see a batsman wait too long for the kind he wants or thinks he wants."

"I like to see a batsman take a clout at every good one, irrespective of how many balls and strikes have been called on him. Of course when a batsman sees that a pitcher is exploding it is his cue to wait till the last minute, but I believe in going after everything good that a steady pitcher sends along."

EIGHT ARE DROWNED ON HEREFORD INLET

TREACHEROUS BAR IS SCENE OF YACHT WRECK.

FISHING BOATS GO DOWN

Captains of Small Craft Hasten to Make Shore When Brisk Breeze Arises, but Two of Them Meet Fatal Mishaps.

Anglesea, N. J., July 30.—Two yachts coming in from the fishing banks capsized on Hereford Inlet bar off here Sunday and so far as can be ascertained eight persons lost their lives. There were 32 persons on one yacht, of whom seven were lost and 12 on the other, all of whom, but one were saved. That not more tell victims to the rough sea, was due to the heroism of Capt. Henry S. Ludlow, of the Hereford Inlet life-saving station, and a crew of five men. It was at first thought that from 14 to 25 persons had been lost, but after an investigation the coroner stated that he believed only eight were lost. His list is as follows: Bodies recovered: Frederick Fisher, Sr., Philadelphia. Herbert Hammell, Lansdale, Pa. Walter Snyder, Philadelphia. John Fogarty, Haverford, Pa. J. Starkey, Philadelphia. Jerry Donohue, Philadelphia. Unknown man.

Missing: Samuel Lodner, Woodbury, N. J.

Anglesea is one of the favorite fishing places along the southern New Jersey coast and has seldom had a busier Sunday. Every excursion train from Philadelphia and other nearby points came down crowded with visitors most of whom intended spending the day in fishing.

The weather in the morning was ideal and all the fishing boats took out large crowds to the fishing banks. After noon, however, a brisk breeze sprang up and the captains of the small craft hoisted sail and started for home. Most of the fleet got in without mishap, although some of them had considerable difficulty in clearing the Hereford bar.

Wind and Sea Rough.

The two that got into trouble were the sloop yacht Nora, which had on board Capt. Herbert Silvers, his mate and 59 passengers, and the sloop Alvin B. with a party of 13.

The Nora had gone to the fishing banks at Five Barchon, about ten miles out to sea early in the day. When the wind began to freshen Capt. Silvers decided it was time to make port and with the assistance of a small gasoline engine and a good spread of canvas he made good time toward Anglesea. As the sloop bowed along the wind was getting stiffer and the sea rougher.

Capt. Silvers, from long experience, knew how treacherous is the Hereford bar and approached it with his usual caution. The sand obstruction is about a mile from shore. Just as he was about to go over it a heavy squall struck the Nora.

Yacht Turns Turtle.

Despite the efforts of the captain the craft leeled over and was hit by a huge wave. The wind and the wave coming together was more than the yacht could stand and it turned completely over throwing the 32 occupants into the sea.

As the boat turned over the mast snapped like a reed. There was an agonizing cry as the yacht turned turtle which was quickly silenced when nearly all the victims disappeared beneath the water.

The heavy sea, however, probably was responsible for the saving of most of the survivors as the waves were so rough that the upturned yacht was tossed about thus uncovering the struggling victims who were underneath.

Cling to Ship's Keel.

As many as could tried to reach the keel, but it was a difficult matter as there was an indescribable tangle of fishing nets, lines, baskets and sail.

There was no time to help one another as it was all that the struggling men could do to keep their heads above the water.

One boy, however, Frederick Fisher, aged 15 years, who was found struggling near the boat, was lifted up on the upturned keel by two men, who had tight grips on the vessel.

After hanging to the yacht for nearly an hour and as hope of rescue had almost been abandoned a government life boat commanded by Capt. Henry S. Ludlow, of the Hereford Inlet life saving station, hove in sight.

As he came near he shouted encouragement to the men clinging to the Nora and after some maneuvering managed to get close to the capsized vessel. He was not a moment too soon for as he came within a boat's length of the Nora four men, weakened from exhaustion, let go their holds and began floating away.

Pull Four From Death.

Capt. Ludlow threw his boat around and the four half drowned men were drawn out of the water. Then at the risk of their own lives the rescuers went after the other men and pulled them into their boat.

Shortly after the survivors of the Nora were brought ashore another yacht, the Alvin B. was seen to capsize about a mile above the place where the Nora went over. There were several boats in the vicinity at the time and all but one person was saved. The Alvin B. was owned by E. L. Hallman, a lawyer, of Pottsville, Pa. He and a party of friends were on board at the time.

To the Man Whose Advertising Is Paying—

If you can get better results for your advertising appropriation you want to know it. If you cannot get better results for your money, you want the satisfaction of knowing that your present investment is paying as well as it can be made to pay.

MANY a successful advertiser feels that although his advertising is paying, if he could only eliminate running waste and the element of chance, that it would pay better.

And very often that's true.

If we can show you the way to greater returns for less money you will be glad to have us do so.

And we will be just as glad to tell you to go ahead as you are going now if we find that your present advertising is developed to the maximum of efficiency.

We offer you, free of charge or obligation, an opportunity to have your proposition subjected to the light of the Lord & Thomas Record of Results.

This Record is a tabulation of actual results, inquiries and sales known positively to have been produced by scores of classifications of selling plans and copy advertising hundreds of different commodities in all good newspapers and other media.

No matter how successful your advertising is at present the Lord & Thomas Record of Results may point the way to greater returns for less money—the difference, to be credited to your profits.

For the Record of Results is a guide to the three essentials of advertising—plans, copy, media.

Do you think that your advertising, based on unrecorded experience, and judgment, and opinion, would prove 100% right as to plans, copy and media, when subjected to the light of the Record of Results?

Our records and tests have in some cases proved 80% difference in selling power in favor of copy based on the Record of Results over copy prepared on judgment, opinion and unrecorded experience.

The waste mediums in lists used by advertisers who have transferred their accounts to us has proved as high as 33%.

When you consider these facts can you afford to ignore the opportunity we offer you? It may be even though your advertising is paying, that it could be made to pay better. Or it may be that you are now reaping the maximum of possible results. Isn't it worth finding out which is the case?

One of our representatives is in your city every few days looking after the interests of some of our present clients. That is why we are advertising in this newspaper—to you—NOW.

We ask you to write today—granting us an interview in your office. You will in no way obligate yourself by asking us to call.

We are issuing a series of small books (cloth bound) covering advertising in all its phases, which we send free to interested advertisers.

CHAPTER XVI.

THE hot days dragged on. Dan and his father moved down to the shops. Two cots were placed in the pattern room, where they slept, and where Roger Oakley spent most of his time reading his Bible or in brooding over the situation. Their meals were brought to them from the hotel. It was not that Dan suspected the men of any sinister intentions, but he felt it was just as well that they should understand the utter futility of any lawlessness, and, besides, his father was much happier in the solitude of the empty shops than he could have been elsewhere in Antioch. All day long he followed McClintock about, helping with such odd jobs as were necessary to keep the machinery in perfect order. He was completely crushed and broken in spirit. He had given up.

At the office Dan saw only Holt and McClintock. Sick of Kerr's presence and exasperated at his evident sympathy for the strikers—a sympathy he was at no pains to conceal—he had laid him off, a step that was tantamount to dismissal. Miss Walton was absent on her vacation, which he extended from week to week. It was maddening to him to have her around with nothing to do, for he and Holt found it difficult to keep decently busy themselves now the shops had closed.

Holloway, the vice president of the road, visited Antioch just once during the early days of the strike. He approved—being of an approving disposition—all of Oakley had done and then went back home to Chicago, after telling him not to yield a single point in the fight.

"We've got to starve 'em into submission," said this genial soul. "There's nothing like an empty stomach to sap a man's courage, especially when he's got a houseful of hungry, squalling brats. I don't know but what you'd better arrange to get in foreigners. Americans are too independent."

But Oakley was opposed to this. "The men will be glad enough to accept the new scale of wages a little later, and the lesson won't be wasted on them."

"Yes, I know, but the question is, do we want 'em? I wish Cornish was here. I think he'd advise some radical move. He's all right."

Oakley, however, was devoutly thankful that the general was in England, where he hoped he would stay. He had no wish to see the men ruined. A wholesome lesson would suffice. He was much relieved when the time arrived to escort Holloway to his train.

All this while the Herald continued its attacks, but Dan no longer minded them. Nothing Ryder could say could augment his unpopularity. It had reached its finality. He never guessed that, indirectly at least, Constance Emory was responsible for by far the greater part of Ryder's present bitterness. She objected to his partisanship of the men, and this only served to increase his verbal intemperance, but, in spite of the antagonism of their views, they remained friends. Constance was willing to endure much from Ryder that she would have resented from any one else. She liked him, and she was sorry for him; he seemed unhappy, and she imagined he suffered as she herself suffered and from the same cause. There was still another motive for her forbearance which, perhaps, she did not realize. The strike and Oakley had become a mania with the editor, and from him she was able to learn what Dan was doing.

The unpopularity of his son was a source of infinite grief to Roger Oakley, the more so as he took the burden of it on his own shoulders. He brooded over it until presently he decided that he would have a talk with Ryder and explain matters to him and ask him to discontinue his abuse of Dan. There was a streak in the old convict's mind which was hardly sane, for no man spends the best years of his life in prison and comes out as clear headed as he goes in.

As he pattered about the shops with McClintock he meditated on his project. He was sure if he could show Ryder where he was wrong and unfair he would hasten to make amends. It never occurred to him that Ryder had merely followed in the wake of public opinion, giving it definite expression.

One evening—and he chose the hour when he knew Antioch would be at supper and the streets deserted—he stole from the shops without telling Dan where he was going, as he had a shrewd idea that he would put a veto on his scheme if he knew of it.

With all his contrived pace slackened as he approached the Herald office. He possessed unbounded respect for print and still greater respect for the man who spoke in print.

The door stood open, and he looked in over the top of his steel bowed spectacles. The office was dark and shadowy, but from an inner room, where the presses stood, a light shone. While he hesitated the half grown boy, who was Griff's chief assistant came from the office. Roger Oakley placed a hand on his shoulder.

"Is Mr. Ryder in, sonny?" he asked.

"Yes, he's in the back room, where you see the light."

"Thank you."

He found Ryder busy making up by the light of a single dingy lamp, for the Herald went to press in the morning. Griff gave a start of surprise when he saw who his visitor was. Then he said shrilly: "Well, sir, what can I do for you?"

It was the first time the old convict and the editor had met, and Roger Oakley, peering over his spectacles, studied Ryder's face in his usual slow fashion. At last he said, "I hope I am not intruding, Mr. Ryder, for I'd like to speak with you."

"Then be quick about it," snapped Griff. "Don't you see I'm busy?"

With the utmost deliberation the old convict took from his pocket a large red and yellow bandanna handkerchief. Then he removed his hat and wiped his face and neck with elaborate thoroughness. When he finally spoke he dropped his voice to an impressive whisper. "I don't think you understand Dan, Mr. Ryder, or the reasons for the trouble down at the shops."

"Don't? Well, I'll be charmed to hear your explanation." And he put down the rule with which he had been measuring one of the printed columns on the table before him.

Without being asked, Roger Oakley seated himself in a chair by the door. He placed his hat and handkerchief on a corner of the table and took off his spectacles, which he put into their case. Ryder watched him with curious interest.

"I knew we could settle this, Mr. Ryder," said he with friendly simplicity. "You've been unfair to my son. That was because you did not understand. When you do I am certain you will do what you can to make right the wrong you have done him."

A vicious, sinister smile wreathed Ryder's lips. He nodded. "Go on."

"Dan's done nothing to you, you are hurting him. He doesn't admit it, but I know."

"I hope so," said Ryder tersely. "I should hate to think my energy had been entirely wasted."

A look of painful surprise crossed Roger Oakley's face. He was quite shocked at the un-Christian feeling Griff was displaying. "No, you don't mean that," he made haste to say. "You can't mean it."

"Can't?" cynically.

Roger Oakley stole a glance from under his thick, bushy eyebrows at the editor. He wondered if an apt quotation from the Scriptures would be of any assistance. The moral logic with which he had intended to overwhelm

it was an illustration of your own."

Roger Oakley had risen from his seat.

"What's Dan done to you?" he asked, with just the least perceptible tremor in his tones.

Ryder shrugged his shoulders. "We don't need him in Antioch."

The old man mastered his wrath and said gently:

"You can't afford to be unfair, Mr. Ryder. No one can afford to be unfair. You are too young a man to persevere in what you know to be wrong."

To maintain his composure required a great effort. In the riotous days of his youth he had concluded most arguments in which he had become involved with his fists. Aged and broken, his religion overlaid his still vigorous physical strength but dimly, as a veneer. He squinted his massive shoulders and stood erect, like a man in his prime, and glowered heavily on the editor.

"I trust you have always been able to make right your guiding star," retorted Ryder jeeringly. The anger instantly faded from the old convict's face. He was recalled to himself.

Ordinarily—that is, in the presence of others—Ryder would have felt bound to treat Roger Oakley with the deference due to his years. Alone, as they were, he was restrained by no such obligation. He was in an ugly mood, and he proceeded to give it rein.

"I wish you'd mind your own business," he said suddenly. "What do you mean by coming here to tell me what I ought to do? If you want to know, I'll tell you what I'm going to do. I am going to pound you and that precious son of yours out of this part of the country."

The old man straightened up again as Ryder spoke. The restraint of years dropped from him in a twinkling. He told him he was a scoundrel, and he placed it with an oath, a slip he did not notice in his excitement.

"Hey! What's that?"

"You're a scoundrel!" repeated Roger Oakley, white with rage. He took a step around the table and came nearer the editor. "I don't know but what I ought to break every bone in your body! You are trying to ruin my son!"

He hit the table a mighty blow, with his clenched fist, thrusting his head forward, glared into Ryder's face.

"You have turned his friends against him. Why, he ain't got no left any more. They have all gone over to the other side. And you done it, you done it, and it's got to stop!"

Ryder had been taken back for the moment by Roger Oakley's fierce anger, which vibrated in his voice and flashed in his dark, sunken eyes.

"Get out of here!" he shouted, losing control of himself. "Get out or I'll kick you out!"

"When I'm ready to go I'll leave," retorted the old man calmly, "and that will be when I've said my say."

"You'll go now?" And he shoved him in the direction of the door. The shove was almost a blow, and as it fell on his broad chest Roger Oakley gave a hoarse, inarticulate cry and struck out with his heavy hand. Ryder staggered back, caught at the end of the table as he plunged past it and fell his length upon the floor. The breath whistled sharply from the old man's lips. "There," he muttered; "you'll keep your hands off!"

Ryder did not speak or move. All was hushed and still in the room. Suddenly a nervous chill seized the old convict. He shook from head to heel.

"I didn't mean to hit you," he said, speaking to the prostrate figure at his feet. "Here, let me help you."

He stooped and felt around on the floor until he found Ryder's hand. He released it instantly to take the lamp from the table. Then he knelt beside the editor. In the corner where the latter lay stood a rusty wood stove. In his fall Griff's head had struck against it.

The lamp shook in Roger Oakley's hand like a leaf in a gale. Ryder's eyes were open and seemed to look into his own with a mute reproach. For the first time in his life, his head, twisted to one side. The old man felt of his heart. One or two minutes elapsed. His bearing was one of feverish intensity. He heard three men loiter by on the street and the sound of their footfalls die off in the distance, but Ryder's head had ceased to beat. Fully convinced of this, he returned the lamp to the table and, sitting down in the chair by the door, covered his face with his hands and sobbed aloud.

Over and over he murmured: "I've killed him, I've killed him! Poor boy, poor boy! I didn't go to do it!"

Presently he got up and made a second examination. The man was dead past every doubt. His first impulse was to surrender himself to the town marshal, as he had done once, before under similar circumstances.

Then he thought of Dan.

No, he must escape, and perhaps it would never be known who had killed Ryder. His death might even be attributed to an accident. In his excitement he forgot the boy he had met at the door. That incident had passed entirely from his mind, and he did not remember the meeting until days afterward.

He had been utterly indifferent to his own danger, but now he extricated the lamp and made his way cautiously into the outer room, and peered into the street. As he crouched in the darkness by the door he heard the town bell strike the hour. He counted the strokes. It was 8 o'clock. An instant later and he was burying down the street, feeling from the ghastly horror of the white, upturned face and the eyes, with their look of mute reproach.

When he reached the railroad track at the foot of Main street he paused irresolutely.

"If I could see Dan once more, just once more," he muttered under his breath, but he crossed the tracks with a single long leap, turned toward the shops, a black blur in the night a thousand yards distant.

Main street became a dusty country road south of the tracks. He left it at this point and skirted a cornfield, going in the direction of the creek.

At the shops Dan had waited supper

Two men pushed past him, carrying the body of Ryder between them.

Two men pushed past him, carrying the body of Ryder between them. He decided he must have gone uptown, probably to the Joyce's. So he had eaten his supper alone. Then he drew his chair in front of an open window and lighted his pipe. It was very hot in the office, and by and by he carried his lamp into the pattern room, where he and his father slept. He arranged their two cots, blew out the light, which seemed to add to the heat, partly undressed and lay down. He heard the town bell strike 8 and then the half hour. Shortly after this he must have fallen asleep, for all at once he awoke with a start. From off in the night a confusion of sounds reached him. The town bell was ringing the alarm. At first he thought it was a fire, but there was no light in the sky, and the bell rang on and on.

He got up and put on his coat and hat and started out.

It was six blocks to the Herald office, and as he neared it he could distinguish a group of excited, half-dressed men and women where they clustered on the sidewalk before the building. A carriage was standing in the street.

He elbowed into the crowd unnoticed and unrecogized. A small boy who had climbed into the low boughs of a maple tree now shouted in a perfect frenzy of excitement: "Hi, they're bringing him out! Jimmy Smith's got him by the legs!"

At the same moment Chris Berry appeared in the doorway. The crowd stood on tiptoe, breathless, tense and waiting.

"Drive up a little closer, Tom," Berry called to the man in the carriage. Then he stepped to one side, and two men pushed past him carrying the body of Ryder between them. The crowd gave a groan.

NEW SYSTEM OF WEIGHING THE MAILS

Enables Government to Learn Number of Packages and Distance They Are Carried.

A rule recently sent out from the postal department at Washington to the postoffices of the country will cause an unusual amount of work for those who weigh and care for the mails. The government is now making a schedule of all the second class matter sent from every postoffice to the various states of the union. The new order will give to the government a complete schedule of the number of packages and also the weight of the second class packages which leave every office and the destination will also be known.

The order is one that will entail a lot of trouble on the newspapers of the country at the start, but will not cause any delay in the delivery of the mail when the lists are made as they should be to conform to the new order. The plan of numbering and weighing the packages on each state will continue for the next six months. The mail for each state is assorted, and then the number of packages are noted, as well as the total weight of the packages. These packages are packed by states and sent from the postoffice in this manner though the sacks will be distributed on the trains to make the best possible connections.

While nothing definite has been given out by the government as to the ultimate object of this new rule it is believed it will be continued for certain periods until such time as the next mail letting contract time arrives, and then the government may make a new form of specification for bidding on the mails, adding a new feature which will be aside from the pound rate. It will include a distance rate as well as a pound rate. Now the mails are weighed solely to get the amount in pounds, and mail carried five miles goes as does that carried a hundred or a thousand miles, while under the new ruling there will be a pound as well as a distance rate.

FIGHTS HORNETSWITH SICKLE; CUTS OFF EAR

Pennsylvania Farmer Is Very Severely Wounded Defending Himself.

Beaver Falls, Pa., July 30.—With one ear severed, a wound in the back of his neck, the exposed portion of his body covered with hornet stings and his head and clothing saturated with blood, William Glenz, a farmer of Darlington township, rushed from a field to his home yesterday and fell fainting on the doorstep. He had been cutting weeds out of fence corners with a sickle when he accidentally cut open a hornets' nest. The insects swarmed about his head and he ran for his life.

As he sped toward his home he brandished the sickle about his head in an effort to keep the hornets off. The edge of the implement was keen. One sweep of the blade cut off an ear and another sank the sharp edge into the back of his neck. His condition is serious, but he is expected to recover.

CORPORATION TAX HIGHER

INDIANA STATE BOARD'S REPORT FOR CURRENT YEAR.

Increase of Approximately $16,000,000 in Valuation, of Which $12,000,000 Is Added to Steam Railroads.

Indianapolis, Ind., July 30.—The property appraisement of Indiana corporations for 1906 as made by the state board of tax commissioners shows an increase of approximately $16,000,000 over the valuation for 1905. Of this amount $12,000,000 is due to increased valuation of steam railroads. The remainder of the increase is distributed among electric lines, telephone and telegraph companies, express companies, pipeline companies and other small corporations. There are comparatively no reductions in the appraisements of 1905.

Both the Postal and Western Union Telegraph companies' rate of assessment per mile was increased $4.15.

The Adams Express company's rate was increased from $348 a mile to $357, by far the greatest increase among express companies.

The Louisville & Jeffersonville Bridge company shows the greatest valuation and the largest increase. Its appraisement on main line property in 1905 was $125,000. This year it is raised to $700,000.

The reports of the railroads show increased mileage. The Indiana Harbor railroad, which last year had but 4.86 of main track, this year shows 10.6 miles.

The state tax board has now finished its work on corporations after having been in session for several weeks.

CHEAPENS COST OF GLASS

Invention of Belgian Seems Likely to Revolutionize Industry of Nuremberg.

A departure in glassmaking methods threatens almost a revolution in the industry, according to Consul Bock, of Nuremberg.

Should it really possess the advantages claimed it would cause serious damage to the blowing glass plate industry in this district, where "three-fourths" glass plates are chiefly manufactured. So far two methods have been employed in the manufacture of crystal plate glass and mirror and window glass, namely, that of casting and blowing. The new third method is the invention of Mr. Fourcault, a Belgian, who has sold his patent to a European syndicate of plate glass manufacturers for $552,000. This syndicate consists of German, French and Belgian manufacturers and one Bohemian factory.

Until now in the making of window glass the molten substance has been blown into cylinders by glassmakers' pipes and subsequently flattened, while in the making of plate glass the viscid mass was cast from the pots and rolled. The new invention draws the molten substance from the pot and conducts it between rollers lying side by side. Seventeen pairs of these rollers are built up towerlike above the pot.
